

TEETH

Blank white. My coat is full of wind.
The trees endure, endure.
Everything is ice or becoming ice.

The cold makes cheeks hard, lips hard,
they shrink to a smile
and my teeth come forward:
long, dry, blank white.

Eric Rensberger

Reprinted from Poems of Eric Rensberger, located at www.ericrensbergerpoetry.net.